Dubai: Students and staff from the Amity University volunteered to distribute nearly 1,000 care packages to blue-collar workers at the university's construction site. The students were able to bring a lot of smiles to the faces of the labourers working hard to bring the blue print of the university's new campus to fruition.

The campaign, initiated by students under the mentorship of Nowsheen Yaqoob from the Student Development department and faculty member Munawwar reached out to the workers under the 'Amity Cares' — An initiative launched by the Dubai International Academic City (DIAC).

Rajat Singh, a final year postgraduate student and volunteer, said: "These people do a lot for us, and this was a fantastic platform to interact with the workers."

The act of gratitude involved over 100 volunteers pledge and each package contained edibles such as biriyani, Laban, water, juices and dates, followed by a separate bundle packed with personal hygiene products. Distributions were carried out in two shifts at the site to ensure workers from both, the morning and evening shift, received the items.
